“Vision, Innovation and Trending in the Marine Sector”

There is nothing as constant as change in the world of shipping.

Propulsion systems have evolved from muscle, harnessing of the wind, steam to internal combustion engines as sources of power.

Fuels, similarly, have changed from wood to coal to oil, nuclear to LNG with proposals for fuel cells, advanced electrical energy storage systems and new more environmentally friendly fuel

Navigation and control systems have improved tremendously and we are now looking at the dawn of the era of the fully automated uncrewed vessel.

Where will the future take us? Mari-Tech2020 promises a 20/20 visionary outlook

Looking forward at coming innovations in fuels, propulsion systems, controls and more.

Call for Papers.

Manufacturers, Designers, Academia, Class:

- Maritime emissions and the era of ultra-low-sulphur fuel oil
- Alternative fuels; alternative energy capture and storage
- Electric propulsion; hybrid solutions
- Autonomous vessels and automation
- Vessel innovations: antifouling, ballast alternatives, hull designs
- Arctic operations
